Grands Reorganize This Sunday

The reorganization meeting of Coleman Grands Hockey Club will be held in the Grands Union Hotel on Sunday Oct. 31st at 7 p.m.

The Alberta-British Columbia Hockey League will get under way on Saturday December 4th with two zones operating each on a double schedule and with an interlocking single schedule. Coleman, Michel-Natal and Pernie will compose the eastern section with a possibility of Bellevue back again this year. Cranbrook, Creston and possibly Kimberley will make up the western section. The bottom club in each section will drop out of the playoffs.

In a meeting at Pernie on Sunday Kimberley and Bellevue failed to send representatives and the meeting decided to give them until November 1st to signify their intention.

Mr. DeArmond of Cranbrook conducted the meeting with Dave Flynn acting as secretary. According to the constitution the office of Pres. and Sec. were to be filled by Coleman this year but as Coleman declined, the retiring officers were returned. Representatives at the meeting came from Coleman, Michel-Natal, Pernie, Cranbrook and Creston. R. Spillers, W. Gate and C. Freeman represented Coleman.

In opening the meeting it was shown that $116.59 was in the club treasury and that the registration fee of $10 remain plus 10c per every person named on each clubs proposed list. The $100 bond to be posted in event of defaulted games remains as last year.

Cranbrook reported that a referees school had been held at Nelson with good results and that a similar school will be held in Cranbrook on Sunday, November 6th. It was the unanimous decision referees will wear white sweaters this season complete with ABC Association crests.

The matter of the league schedule will be handled again this year by Ray Spillers of Coleman.

Coleman delegates mentioned at the meeting the co-operation received from Pernie last year in regards supplying ice during a playoff game, expressing sincere gratitude for this assistance. Both Coleman and Michel-Natal intimated that they may seek an arrangement with the Pernie rink for practice sessions, the Pernie delegates stating that they were willing to assist the other clubs in any way they could.

Michel-Natal delegates moved that 10% of all playoff games be turned over to the association, the motion was seconded by Creston and passed without dissenting vote.

Jury Brings Back Verdict Of Accidental Death

A cononer's jury under direction of Coroner Doctor E. J. Liesemer of Coleman, probing into the death of William Russell a Coleman mine worker, returned the following verdict Tuesday evening after an half hour deliberation — "We the jury from evidence submitted find that William Russell came to his death October 18th at approximately 7:45 a.m. at the strip Coal Crusher of the McGillivray Plant. Medical examinations disclosed that the late William Russell was pronounced dead on arrival shortly after 8:00 a.m. at the Crows Nest, Pass Municipal hospital, contributing factors resulting in the death being fractured right arm, lacerations to the arm pit, right ear almost torn off, nose broken, penetrating wound to the brain one half inch in width and three inches in depth at the right eye which caused extensive brain injury as well as injury on the right forehead. In our opinion death was accidental and no blame is attached to any person or persons." The jury comprised foreman J. R. Hill, Henry Zak Jr., Rudolph Kwasiene, George Jenkins, H. Glocowski and Harold Nelson. The body was identified by Trevor McDonald.

Evidence was given by Doctor Emil Aiello attending physician of Coleman who indicated that Russell was dead on arrival at the hospital. Doctor Aiello also pointed out that he attributed death to the injury to the right eye which was caused by a penetration by some object into the deceased man's head to a depth of about three inches lacerating the brain. The penetration was three inches deep and about one half inch wide stated doctor Aiello who pointed out that the wound was similar to that of a bullet hole.

Plans of the accident area were furnished by Arthur Graham, mine surveyor who explained the set of plans in detail.

William Kinnear company checkweighman described the area around the scene of the accident and pointed out the duties of the late Mr. Russell. He also pointed out that the machinery where Mr. Russell was killed was well fenced off and that employees were warned against greasing machinery while the said machinery was in operation. He also stated that Russell was well acquainted with his work.

William Cox of Bellevue, a truck driver for the mine and the first to arrive on the scene of the accident stated that he arrived at the ramp with a load of coal to dump and went to see if it was O.K. for him to dump his load. He noticed the motor below the ramp was smoking and hollered to the late Mr. Russell to shut it off. Not seeing Russell or getting any response to his call, Cox went down to the motor and saw Russell caught in a belt. Cox rushed to the switch to shut off the motor and then ran for help and returned to remove Russell from the belt.

Louis Luini, a lubrication and tire man in the company garage and also appointed as first aid man in this district of the mine gave evidence which indicated that he had been called to bring a stretcher and first aid supplies to the ramp at about 7:45 a.m. On arriving at the scene Mr. Luini stated that he felt for a pulse and heart beat but found neither and in his opinion the man appeared to be dead. Mr. Russell was immediately removed from the belt and taken to the hospital where he was pronounced dead.

William Goodwin, mine manager at the McGillivray mine was called upon and gave evidence which indicated that guards around the machinery at this point were quite adequate for the safety of the workers.

Conducting the inquest was Mines Inspector Phillip Melson of Bellevue.

Norman Ash secretary of the Coleman local of the UMWA was also present at the inquest.

From evidence submitted it would appear the deceased had been greasing a conveyor or belt drive while it was in operation and had become entangled in the belt causing extensive injuries to his body.

William Russell
Laid To Rest

The Holy Ghost Catholic church in Coleman was filled to capacity Thursday morning when the friends and relatives of the late William Russell, local mine worker, gathered to attend the funeral services.

Following the service conducted in the church, the funeral cortege proceeded to the Holy Ghost cemetery where a graveside service was conducted by the Rev. M. McGreevey after which John Kulig, president of the Coleman branch of the Canadian Legion read a service for the dead. Military honors were held for Mr. Russell who was a member of the Army Service Corps Third Division during the Second World War. A squad of the RCME fired a salute in honor of the ex-serviceman while the Coleman Pipe Band under direction of Pipe Major Moore played the "Last Lament." Bugler for the services was William Goodwin of Coleman's Palbearers were William Hogan, Walter Mullins, Adam Morris, Dave McDonald, Trevor McDonald and Robert Franz, all of Coleman.

In the account of the death of William Russell it read that Mrs. Alice Blinn and Mrs. Dorothy Smith were stepisters. This should have read sisters

Inventor Of Light Bulb Performed Great Service To Miners

The 75th anniversary of Thomas A. Edison's invention of the first practical incandescent lamp bulb was celebrated on October 21.

At the same time, the mining industry throughout the world pays homage to the great inventor for an allied discovery, the first safe miner's cap lamp.

Until Mr. Edison's cap lamp for miners was introduced in 1915, the death toll from mine fires and explosions throughout the world was staggering. In one five year period — 1906 through 1910 — an average of 2657 miners were killed annually by accidents underground in the United States alone.

What has been achieved since then is illustrated by the 1953 accident record in coal mining. Fatalities in the U.S. last year totalled 457, the lowest in statistical history. Removal of such explosion hazards as open-flame lamps, and intensive educational campaigns for better safe mining conditions by management, mine associations, government and union groups, share the credit for this record.

Mr. Edison began his work on a battery-powered electric cap lamp for miners in 1912. He later described it as his "most humanitarian invention," because it replaced the hazardous open flame lamps.

Although the primary purpose of the lamp was to remove the cause of explosions, its brighter light improved production as well as safety. Few jobs are so completely dependent on light as a miner's.

Officials of Mine Safety Appliances Company of Canada Limited state the present model lamp has 100 times more illuminating intensity than the first model, which was introduced into coal mines in Canada in 1917.

Because they provide better light to help production these lamps also are now used in non-grassy metal mines and tunnels where there are no explosion hazards.

During the past 35 years, Edison cap lamps have become a familiar working tool of the Canadian miner.

The company states that since the first installation more than 700,000 Edison miners' cap lamps have been placed in service throughout the world.

Each day as miners strap on their batteries and snap the headpiece in place on their protective hats, they have good cause to thank the man who gave them a brighter and safer outlook on their jobs, Mr. Thomas A. Edison.

One Hundred Years Of Service

This year 1954 marks the Centennial of Nursing. In 1854 Florence Nightingale started modern nursing when she set out to the Crimea to devote her services to the care of the sick and wounded.

The nurses duties in any community is an important one and at this time it is fitting that we consider the debt we owe the nurse and review once more the duties and services she performs.

Opportunities for nurses are wide and varied. Here are some of the jobs they perform:

- (1) More than half of all professional nurses work in institutions, i.e. hospitals, mental institutions and convalescent homes, rendering service to more than 144,000 bedsides. Administering new drugs and treatments calls for a high degree of skill. But her unique contribution consists of giving "the individual touch" in patient care, promoting the psychological disposition so necessary to swift and complete recovery. In the hospital, registered nurses and non-professional nursing assistants work together in the care of patients.
- (2) Public health nurses are at work in communities and schools throughout the country. Their task is largely a preventive one, teaching people proper health care, guarding mental health and working particularly with mothers and children. Public health nurses are also employed in some 72 Red Cross outposts dotted over remote areas of the country and with 115 branches of the Victorian Order of Nurses in Canada.
- (3) Many nurses are engaged in private duty, caring for the sick in homes. They work through private nurses' Registries.
- (4) Nurses are employed in many industrial plants, promoting industrial safety, giving certain medical care in case of accidents and promoting employee health.
- (5) Nurses also serve in the armed forces, with international agencies such as the World Health Organization and the United Nations, as teachers in schools of nursing and in airlines.

NEED FOR MORE NURSES:

Acute shortages of nurses do exist in hospitals in certain areas and in certain types of nursing, particularly in the psychiatric field and public health. The shortage is further aggravated each year, as demand continues to exceed supply. More hospitals and health agencies are being built, while existing ones are expanding their services. Health insurance plans enable more people to go to hospitals. Health education programmes influence people to seek medical and nursing care readily. New drugs and medical treatments require more and more highly skilled nurses.

Much has been said about the means of relieving the nursing shortage. Some clarification is needed on this matter. There are only two means of relieving any nursing shortage:

- (1) By recruiting more nurses. Agencies such as the Canadian Nurses' Association continue in their efforts to recruit more students. At present, the nursing profession takes about one-quarter of all female high school graduates, a proportion that is not likely to increase. Greatest hope lies in an increase in the total number of high school graduates.
- (2) By making more efficient use of the existing supply. Progress has been made in this field, with a study of the activities of the Head Nurse, conducted by the Department of National Health and Welfare. It has been shown that her total efficiency can increase by delegating less demanding tasks to other personnel. Studies of teamwork among the various services in a hospital will also increase effective supply by showing how staff nurses, nursing assistants and other hospital staff can work more efficiently together.

WHO ARE NURSES?

About half of all nurses are recruited from cities, and half from rural areas. Almost half get married a few years after graduation from nursing schools, a good reason for the difficulty in maintaining adequate number of nurses. However, some married nurses continue to practice.

STUDENTS IN NURSING:

More than 15,000 girls are enrolled in 171 nursing schools, which may be affiliated with a hospital or a university. To enter a school of nursing a girl must be a high school graduate with certain academic courses. Once she dons her student's uniform, she enters into a three, or more, year programme which, contrary to some public opinion, gives her an "education" rather than a "training". Among the courses she takes are: Anatomy, Physiology, Psychology, Pharmacology, Obstetrics. There is general agreement that as in other forms of education, greater financial support should come from Government and other interested groups for nursing education.

SALARY SCALE:

Nursing salaries compare favorably with some other professional occupations in which women are engaged. Salaries have certainly improved in recent years.

PROFESSIONAL ETHICS:

The fundamental responsibility of a nurse is to conserve life, to alleviate suffering and to promote health. She recognizes not only the responsibilities, but the limitations of her professional functions; recommends or gives medical treatment without medical orders only in emergencies and reports such action to a physician at the earliest possible moment. This code of ethics is directly related to public protection.

In every province, there are laws providing for registration of the professional nurse. She is only privileged to use the title R.N. upon meeting the requirements of these laws which include passing examinations.

CANADIAN NURSES' ASSOCIATION

This Association represents professional nursing in Canada. It is a federation of the ten provincial nurses' associations, with a membership of approximately 35,000. In addition, there are local chapters of nurses in most communities. This provides a two way channel of communications which enables individual nurses to contribute ideas on nursing improvements, as well as permitting the transmission of national nursing planning to the local level.

The Canadian Nurses' Association believes a better understanding of nursing service by the Canadian public will help to promote the health and welfare of the nation.

J. Hugh Campbell Succumbs

With the death of J. Hugh Campbell, it is of special interest to re-print his first editorial in the Macleod Weekly News of July 17th, 1919, when Charlie Underwood was business manager. He returned from the First Great War after serving in the Strathcona Horse, and was editor of the Weekly News till he went to the Calgary Herald, which was in 1921. He remained in Calgary till 1928 when he was appointed CPR Press Bureau representative in Winnipeg. He was loaned to the Canadian government for the duties of the Wartime Information Board in Washington, D.C., during World War II and in 1945 he was appointed manager of the CPR public relations department in Montreal. Tom Holstead, Publisher of the Coleman Journal, worked with Mr. Campbell at this time.

Here is his initial bow to the people of Fort Macleod as expressed in the editorial 35 years ago:

In making our initial bow to the public we crave their indulgence to a certain extent owing to our colossal ignorance of the finer details of the newspaper game. We have, however, certain ideals with regard to the operation of a newspaper and foremost among these is to supply the news and tell the truth. It is upon these lines that the Macleod Weekly News will be run and should the two conflict it will be borne in mind that what is new is news and liable to spoil while Truth is mighty and will prevail unaided. Should the paper therefore be called on to discriminate between what is new and what is true we will follow the first call of duty and supply the news.

We would further appeal to the public for their assistance both in the way of support to the paper through the medium of our advertising columns and prompt communication of any events that are publishable, and of interest to the rest of our readers. It is a well known fact that while a local weekly paper is awaited with interest each week by people of the town in which it is published, when it does make its appearance on the streets it is hastily scanned through by these same people and thrown aside with the usual remark, "Gee, but that's a rotten rag — nothing in it — I could write a better paper myself." Have not you done and said just about the same thing yourself, dear reader, of your local paper wherever it may have been? The natural inference is that the paper does not obtain all the news of the town, the supply of which news to the people is its primary object. May we point out in view of this that the editor of the average paper is not a mind reader or a sleuth and as it is impossible to employ a large force of reporters to ferret out all the local news it would be the simplest thing in the world for the readers of the Macleod News to make a real live paper and one that would be of interest to all sections of the community if each of you who is strolling around keeping some choice bit of information under your hat would drop around to the News office and loosen up.

By this, however, we do not mean that our columns may be used for any personal purposes or that we will take sides with any person or faction against any other. We will do our knocking and boosting absolutely impartially when a knock or a boost is coming and we may say that we are not afraid to do the former and will be delighted to boost for anybody or anything that is deserving.

So, People of Macleod, we extend to you our first editorial greetings and beg to assure you that we're with you while you're with us.

Tipson Touring

By Carol Lane
Women's Travel Authority

Forty pounds of luggage is enough for any woman. I know, because I just completed a 10-mile tour of the country with that amount—and I had more clothes than I actually needed.

The whole trick is simplicity itself. Here's what I did: I wore a neat grey gabardine suit for my basic driving costume. The skirt was wide and the shoulders of the jacket roomy enough for comfortable sitting. I carried one plain blouse and one rather dressy nylon blouse, both of which wash in a jiffy and need no ironing. Occasionally, I substituted a lightweight cardigan for the jacket. I took three sets of quick-drying nylon undies and stockings, one set of jewellery for both sport and dress outfits, one pair of low-heeled shoes for driving, a simple beret-type hat, and a head scarf.

That's enough for your basic needs—but you still have pounds to go! For more formal wear, take one basic, solid-colour dress, a number of simple but smart accessories for trimming, a pair of high-heeled shoes, a dressy hat and you're set in the formal department.

Now, for the rest of your wardrobe: a playsuit with a detachable skirt (seersucker is nearly wrinkle-proof), a rugged life costume consisting of shorts, pedal pushers and classic sports blouse, pullman slippers, a dressing gown, nylon nightgown or pajamas, toilet articles, a lightweight travel iron.

You now have about forty pounds, including the bag—enough for a trip cross-country and back.

THEATRE NOTES

"Raiders of the Seven Seas"

John Payne, a pirate, captures a group of Spanish prisoners and makes them his crew. During his subsequent raids, Payne takes as a prize a Spanish countess, Donna Reed. Miss Reed is a spirited girl and tries to ruin his piratical adventures. By the time Payne has arranged for her ransom by the officer who was to have married her, the pirate has fallen in love with her. Exposing her intended as a coward and a liar, Payne goes to ask for her hand. But Donna has escaped. It is only after she learns that Payne believes her to be the killer of his aide, Lon Chaney, that she returns to him and helps save the day.

"The Command"

Guy Madison, a captain in the army medical corps, takes command of a troop in the field when its captain is slain by Indians in Wyoming around 1878. The men resent being commanded by a bedico, but the troop is attached to two companies of infantry engaged in escorting a civilian wagon train, through hostile Indian country, to the Paradise river. The Redskins harrass the column continuously; the train is hit by an epidemic of what is thought to be smallpox; the foot soldiers begin to crack up. When the colonel in charge of the train suffers a stroke, Madison takes full command and contacts a ruse whereby the Indians are tricked into taking a brutal beating. The Redskins are defeated and, safe from further attack, the column moves on to the safety of a nearby fort.

"The Man From The Alamo"

Glenn Ford is chosen by his comrades—defending the Alamo against Santa Anna's hordes—to warn their families at Ox Bow against the onrushing Mexican army. He arrives too late, finding among the dead his own wife and son, and learns that American renegades, dressed as Mexicans, were responsible for the massacre. Later Ford is arrested as a deserter in the city of Franklin and, while in jail, picks up the trail of the renegade killers. The leader of the desperadoes, Victor Jory, arranges for Ford to crash out of jail, and does. Victor Jory's forces, but is seriously wounded while warning Franklin's evacuating settlers that Jory plans to attack them. At last convinced of Ford's integrity, the army officer who had him originally jailed, places him in command of the departing wagon train; Jory's band is wiped out, and Ford returns to the army.

ASK WESTERN CANADIAN COAL BE USED INSTEAD OF U.S. PRODUCE

The following resolution, 281, submitted by District No. 18, U.M.W.A. of Calgary, Alberta, plus substitute resolution for 193, 195, 196, 199, which were submitted by Local Unions, were endorsed at the C.C.L. Convention held in Toronto, September 27 to October 1. Representing the Michel local union were president Samuel English and Stan Groucutt of Michel.

Resolution 281 submitted by District 18, U.M.W.A.:

"Whereas the coal mining industry in Western Canada has reached a very critical economic position, and whereas the production of coal has dropped in the Province of Alberta alone from 8,824,455 tons in 1946 to 5,917,423 tons in 1953 and the number of men employed in the coal mines has been reduced from 8,583 to 5,760, which means that there has been a reduction in coal production of 2,907,032 tons from 1946 to 1953 and a reduction in the number of men employed in the mines of 2,823 during the same period, and whereas in 1953, Canada imported over 27,000,000 tons of coal from the United States to satisfy its power and heating needs, and whereas during the last war there was a shortage of coal and miners in Canada and the Government of Canada forced the men who had previously working in the coal mines to return to the mines in order to produce more coal, and whereas a national emergency may arise similar to the emergency which arose during the last war, it is our opinion that the coal mining industry should be retained in a healthy condition. Therefore be it resolved that this convention instruct the executive of the Congress to press the Federal Government to substitute at least 2,000,000 tons of coal presently being imported into Canada from the United States, for coal produced in Western Canada, and be it further resolved that the executive of the Congress give full support to the presentation in connection with a Coal Policy to be made to the Federal Government in the very near future by representation of District 18, U.M.W.A. and the Provincial Governments of Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia."

Substitute Resolution for 193, 195, 196, 198, 199 which were submitted by Local Unions: "Whereas the Canadian Congress of Labour has repeatedly asked for a National Fuel Policy, and whereas the Canadian coal industry has further deteriorated in both Eastern and Western Canada since our last Convention, and whereas the proposed mechanization and modern program has been partially suspended in Eastern coal mines due to a loss in markets to imported residual oil, and whereas these conditions are adversely affecting the living standards of Canadian coal miners and their families, be it thereby resolved that this Convention of the Canadian Congress of Labour again urge the Federal Government to inaugurate a National Fuel Policy in order that our fuel resources will be utilized to the best possible advantage. Be it further resolved that the executive of this Congress continue to give full support to any representations compatible with the C.C.L. policy that may be made to the Federal Government on behalf of the coal miners of Canada."

at his home in Calgary last week. Mr. Scott was well known here having refereed many a hockey game and a staunch supporter of Coleman hockey teams.

showed plenty of skating ability and hustle, although lacking in the finish that makes a contender. No doubt the added year of experience and the practice time available with artificial ice will make the apple country club a tough one.

Coleman well knows the improvement that Cranbrook has made since they have had artificial ice and the commercial league and look forward to them icing a strong club this year.

Fernie Rangers have organized again and will get into the swing a little earlier this year. Late in getting started last season, the Rangers made it tough for Cranbrook during the zone finals.

Michel-Natal are ready to go and like Coleman are faced with the curse of natural ice. At their organization meeting of a week ago the club decided to ask that their first games be played away from home.

A big hole for the Grands to fill will be that left by Adam Kryczka when he left to attend University at Edmonton. Adam in his first year of Intermediate reminding, drew the respect of all opposing clubs.

Ray Spillers, the old reliable, has been under the weather this year and intimated that he might have to curtail his activities with the various clubs. Five will get you ten that Ray spends as many hours around the rink this year as he has in the past.

Jimmie Evans reports that he will consider coaching again this year. Credit is due the old pro for the results of his last year's efforts. At this time last year hopes for a strong juvenile club was scant, yet after a month or so the locals burnt up the southern part of the province burying their opposition under basketball scores.

Creston, Fernie, Cranbrook, Kimberley and Michel-Natal have already joined the A.B.C. League with Bellevue and Coleman yet to decide. Artificial ice in most centers will help the B.C. Clubs.

Creston stayed out of the league last season but played a lot of games with teams from neighboring centers and had their share of wins. The young Creston club that visited Coleman two years ago
